Client Information

At Blackwallstreets.store, we are passionate about supporting black entrepreneurs and promoting economic empowerment within the black community.

Our website is a reflection of our commitment to this cause, providing a space where black-owned businesses can thrive and connect with customers who are eager to support them.

Project summary

To become the go-to destination for those seeking to support black-owned businesses

Objectives

Client is looking to become the go-to destination for those seeking to support black-owned businesses, therefore, our proposal focuses on:

- Implementing a search engine optimization campaign
- Establishing your reporting and analytics

Our SEO Process

Achieving that goal our work will consist of the following phases:

1. Auditing

Before we start developing strategies, we must gather information and learn about the behavior of your website, what visitors do, landing and exit pages, your targets, how long it takes to achieve them, and a thousand other things. We'll do this by reviewing all the information that is already available on Google Analytics and Google Search Console.

2. Accessibility

This phase concerns how search engines access your website, so we'll check the following:

Robots.txt and all the metadata is given to robots individually on each page. HTTP error codes that are coming up, and, above all, when they arise in the case of 5xx and 4xx errors. XML sitemaps and how they are generated and updated. Information architecture. Contents blocked by any circumstance (JavaScript, display: none, etc.) that may affect the ranking.

3. Indexing

Once we verify how search engines are accessing your website, the next step is to ensure that all those pages are actually indexed and that said procedure is performed correctly and with the data that needs to be indexed.

To do this, we'll simply search for several keywords on Google and determine how many of the pages are indexed by the search engine. And, incidentally, what's there for the competition.

4. On-page ranking factors

Content: A website's content is the first thing the search engines look at to rank it. That's why the user visits it, and that's why it's extremely important. We'll review the structure of the information to not only ensure it is legible but also check its coherence and hierarchy.

Information architecture: This concept refers to how we organize and structure the website's content so the user can browse through it. We must keep in mind that poorly defined architecture can harm SEO optimization, generate a bad user experience, and cause a Google ranking drop.

Keywords: We'll design a strategy to rank the pages of your site with different keywords, all relevant to your content and business. Keep in mind that ranking several pages with the same keyword confuses search engines, and above all, users.

5. Off-page ranking factors

Off-page SEO refers to the actions that you and other users take outside of your website to improve the search results. Here, we are talking about far more serious things like using a coherent inbound link strategy, how to coordinate your PR strategy to meet your business targets, and how all this will help customers find you while generating more buzz than the competition.

We'll give you a series of guidelines that are very easy to implement in the short term.

6. Competitor analysis

After closely analyzing your website, we'll analyze three websites of your competition. Why three? Because you may have several relevant players in our industry, and we don't intend to waste working hours on things that are not worthwhile. It may sound blunt, but an SEO expert's time is far better spent designing your strategy.

Here's how we'll turn your brand into the answer consumers seek.
